THE OLD ORDER CHANGETH

How far back can you remember—twenty?—thirty?—forty?—fifty years? Even if it is only ten years you can still say: "Things were different then?"

Change flows over the face of everything, sometimes as imperceptibly as a rising tide, sometimes with the swift, remorseless fury of a tidal wave. Many of us have seen the far-reaching transformations wrought by war and economic breakdown.

Change is inevitable; it is a law of life. But in the life of a people it has to be controlled. It needs a balance wheel to steady it to the pace of progress; and it has a balance wheel in the weight of an informed public opinion, made possible by a free press.

Newspapers put the control of every national or local movement in the hands of the people by submitting all the news to their scrutiny and judgment. The precipitancy of the few is restrained by enlisting the interest of the many.

There will be changes in the years to come. To help you play your part in shaping them into progress, keep in touch with the news. Be informed.

Ronnd About Town

We were pleased to see that one of our popular citizens seems to have found his heart's desire. Friday night. No doubt the young lady will be a frequent visitor in town when other duties do not call her elsewhere.

What was the comotion in town Sunday night. It looks as if part of the young folks were not invited to the party. Never mind we'll see what we can do for you this week end.

Some of the young dancers forgot when to return to the hall after supper. We excuse those of last Friday — no doubt a car ride is a great temptation.

A truck was parked on College Ave. for some time Tuesday night. The driver was either absent-minded or else he had't known parking regulations. He parked against the school fence, but opposite one of the houses, however.

Air-Mindedness Needed

The very recent inauguration of a transcontinental airways express service in the Dominion marks not only a very important milestone in the history of transportation in this country, but also a very valuable contribution to the commercial and industrial life of Canada.

The word "milestone" is a particularly appropriate term to apply to this new development in transport facilities in this country, for the relative rapidity with which new and high-powered airplanes gobble up the miles in their cross-country flights constitutes a promise of big developments in the commercial life of the country in the next few years.

Hard on the heels of the initiation of an airways express service is to come the daily transport of passengers in these pulmans of the sky; in fact, such service may actually be in effect by the time these comments appear in print.

The next step, and this is not likely to be far distant, is the linking up of the Trans-Canada Airways system with the British Imperial Airway lines, thus affording through aerial mail, express and passenger services between centres throughout the Dominion and the important cities of Great Britain and other units of the Empire. These lines are destined to be linked together to form a vast Empire network of rapid transportation of goods, mail and passengers.

With feeder lines operating in the various countries forming the Empire, the time is approaching when it will be possible to fly on a single ticket from any important centre in the Dominion to almost any important city in any other part of the Empire, or vice versa.

Greater Capacity And Speed

Just how soon these ambitions are to be realized to the full it is a little difficult to predict, but the rapidity with which progress in this direction is now being made in a country which has hitherto lagged behind, it may safely be assumed that it is not far distant.

Coincident with this phase of development in the field of commercial aviation in Canada and other parts of the Empire is a marked progressive acceleration in the capacities and speeds of the ships of the air destined to carry much of the mail, express and passenger business of the future.

Here again, it is difficult if not impossible to predict what the limitations of substantial capacity are essential if long distance flying on regular schedule is to be provided at economic rates and much research and experimentation along these lines is being conducted by officials and experts of the principal air lines of the world.

Safety Must Be Assured

One other factor that is essential to the successful operation and maintenance of commercial aviation on large scale basis is safety for the passengers. In this connection strenuous efforts are being made to overcome the not unnatural qualms of those who have yet to make their first trip aloft, and that means by far the great majority of the travelling public.

Statistics show that in this field considerable success has been achieved and some of the European and American companies can point with justifiable pride to a fine record of freedom from accident involving loss of life or injury. When the number of miles flown and the number of passengers carried, together with the infancy of this field of the transportation industry, are taken into consideration, the record may be regarded as a triumph of scientific engineering and human ingenuity.

Insofar as the Canadian service now being launched is concerned, extraordinary efforts have been made, and are being made, to ensure the safety of the passengers of the future, and tributes which have recently been made to the care exercised by those responsible for the organization of the service, the preparation of equipment, handling fields, safety devices and all the arrangements and plans which have to be made in advance of such a great undertaking, appear to be well justified.

Concurrently with the efforts being made to provide for a service at charges within the range of the average traveller's pocketbook, a campaign is being conducted in an effort to make the public air-minded.

Unfortunately for these efforts, the occasional crash is still regarded as a news event of major importance and is treated as such, and Hollywood producers find that pictures depicting airplane accidents bring good results at the box office.

It may be expected, however, that as experience demonstrates the relative safety of this method of transportation, public confidence will grow and the disappearance of public trepidation will mark the solution of the final problem in the development of this great new industry in this country.

Canada Advertiser

A Food Products Campaign Is Put On In England

The Canadian food products campaign in England is "going over," according to a news release. The facts show that poster advertising in large display type and bold colors is being carried on a total of almost 2,500 buses and vans, during a nine-month period, together with feature advertising in the London evening papers and suburban press. This press campaign commenced on September 1 and is to run for a period of six months, covering a circulation of 2,681,292, representing a total of 37,981,685 advertising messages.

She has laid round eggs, eggs shaped like over-size lima beans, eggs looking like overgrown marbles and long, slender eggs. The color of the eggs varies, too, seldom being of normal hue.

Microphone Entertainment

Sir Cedric Hardwicke Deplores Tendency Of The Times

Sir Cedric Hardwicke will not be surprised if the human race becomes deaf and dumb in the next 20 or 40 years if it continues to receive entertainment through the microphone. The distinguished English actor said in an interview at Toronto that the legitimate theatre is the only place left where the audience listens to speech without the aid of an amplifier. "In every other phase of entertainment people are lost without the microphone," he says. "Why, I even wonder sometimes if half my audience hear me. . . . Without the theatre we would be cut from the only real imaginative entertainment."

Referees In Italy

U.S. Gold Hoard

Holds More Than Half Of All Monetary Gold Of The World

The United States treasury disclosed that its gold hoard was about $14,000,000,000—more than 55 per cent. of all the monetary gold in the world.

The United States' holdings grew enormously during the European war crisis, when gold was sent to buy dollar credits. Since September 1, the treasury has acquired $572,768,635 worth of the metal, more than during any similar period in history.

Most of the treasury gold has been converted into cash by the issuance of paper—currency against the metal. However, the department has retained $200,778,097 worth in an unalloyed fund from which it could supply overseas investors who decide to take their money home.

The latest Federal Reserve Board estimate of the world's monetary gold stocks was $23,803,000,000, of which England and France each had about $2,500,000,000 and Holland about $1,000,000,000. The total European gold stocks just before the war crisis was estimated at $9,114,000,000. These figures do not include substantial hoards by private persons.

A Sensible Suggestion

That Coronation Train Be Used For Royal Trip Across Canada

On their three weeks' visit to Canada next summer the King and Queen in their travels from coast to coast will spend some of their time on trains. In this connection a report from Ottawa says: "A train adequate for the royal party would cost in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 without the locomotive." This appears like an outside figure, but even half of this amount seems a high price to pay for the convenience and comfort of Their Majesties. We doubt if the King and Queen would be pleased at such an outlay on their behalf.

There would be a royal train in the Old Country; maybe it still exists. If it does, it might be placed on a boat and brought to Canada for the visit. A couple of years ago the Royal Scot was shipped to Canada, toured the Dominion and the United States and became a valued attraction at the Chicago World's Fair.

Next year the Coronation, a still more modern train than the Royal Scot, will grip her creaking wheels in the States as a display at the New York World's Fair.

Why not make arrangements to have the Coronation train come to Canada while the King and Queen are here for their use in their trip, which will likely take them into every one of the Dominion's nine provinces?—St. Thomas Times-Journal.

SHE COULD NEITHER WALK NOR SLEEP

Arms and Feet Swollen With Rheumatism

This woman suffered for many years. Pain seared her strength until she lost hope of recovery. Many remedies were tried, but nothing brought her any relief. At last her husband persuaded her to try Khusan Salts. "My arms and feet were swollen with rheumatism," she writes, "I could not walk nor get regular sleep, and nothing did me any lasting good. I was so hopeless I never getting better, I lost my good nature entirely. Then my husband persuaded me to try Khusan Salts. After two weeks I began to feel better. I persevered, and in six weeks I was doing housework. Later, I was able to go for a walk. Now I am free from pain and I feel grand." (Mrs.) F.W.

Rheumatism is commonly caused by deposits of uric acid crystals, which lodge in the muscles and joints. Khusan helps to break up these deposits of uric acid crystals and convert them into a harmless solution, which is removed through the natural channel—the kidneys.

A Necessary Industry

Agriculture Should Be Recognized As Such In Canada

The farm problem is universal and nations have attempted to solve it each in their own way. For us in Canada a government bonus is not the solution, neither is price fixing, state control nor a wishy-washy policy of government paternalism. The remedy must be based on the recognition of agriculture as an industry and the right of farm people to enjoy the same opportunities and economic advantages that are within the reach of other social and industrial groups. If agriculture cannot survive on that basis it will have to decline. It cannot prosper on any other basis, for the financial resources of Canada are not sufficient to support agriculture as a bonus industry.—Farmer's Advocate.

Death Rate Down

People Of U.S. Are Healthier Than At Any Previous Period

The people of the United States have been healthier during the last six months than at any time in history.

Dr. Thomas Parran, surgeon-general of the federal public health service, declared unless something unforeseen such as an epidemic occurs, the lowest death rate ever known.

His observations were made just before the opening today of the sixty-seventh annual meeting of the American Public Health Association.

Death rate from all diseases during the first half of 1938 decreased 8½ per cent. from the 1937 rate. Dr. Parran declared, being only 11 deaths for every 1,000 persons.

Drifting In The Arctic

Soviet Vessel To Spend Another Winter In Ice Flies

Captain Constantin Badgin of the Soviet ice-breaker Sedof reported by wireless that his crew was beginning its second Arctic night in good shape about 600 miles from the North Pole. The ice-bound crew marked its first anniversary of involuntary wandering in the grip of Arctic ice. It was just a year ago the Sedof and two other ice-breakers, the Sadko and Malygin, were caught by the northern winter of darkness near the new Siberian Islands.

Since then the Sedof has drifted 1,590 miles—520 of them to the north. Recently she reached 83 degrees 57 minutes north, indicating that a southward drift may have begun.

Captain Badgin reported his men keep occupied with frequent weather observations and necessary upkeep of their vessel.

They have established an emergency camp and supply depot on an ice floe 100 yards from the Sedof, where they have unloaded provisions to sustain them for four months if it becomes necessary to abandon the ship.

Although the message from the Sedof made no mention of the other vessels, the Sadko and Malygin evidently still were locked with the Sedof in the Arctic.

Caught in the winter ice-jam last October 23, they drifted about 250 miles in the first 10 weeks and entered a region never before visited by steamship.

Stabilizer For Cars

Makes It Impossible For A Driver To Lose Control

On a speedway a mechanic fires a gun into the front tire of a car travelling 70 miles an hour. Just as the tire explodes, the driver throws both hands into the air. But the car never even swerves as it continues on the course. On cars with the new Bendix stabilizer attached to the steering tie-rod, a driver cannot lose control. Interaction of springs and hydraulic fluid in the stabilizer locks the steering mechanism for a mere fraction of a second whenever the car meets a sudden shock, thus holding the car to its true course. In the case of a blowout, this locking action is repeated many times in the course of a second; for ordinary shocks it is only temporary and, while relieving road strains, it in no way interferes with normal steering.—Reader's Digest.

Exhibit Of Needlework

Some Pieces Shown In England Were Five Centuries Old

An earl who has made a name for himself in needlework—Lord Spencer—opened an exhibition of five centuries of needlework, at Stoncy Thorpe Hall, in Warwickshire.

Both he and his wife, who is a lady-in-waiting to the Queen, showed pieces that they have done. Queen Elizabeth were gardening aprons. One of them, with accompanying gloves and belt, had been lent. It is embroidered with flowers upside down so that Queen Elizabeth saw them the right way up when she stooped.

Victorian needlework, including a nightgown six yards round embroidered with crown and monogram for Queen Victoria, was so well represented that it had a section to itself. A former Lady Newdegate's penitence stools were described. Lady Newdegate was untidy and left things about. She made stool tops depicting mislaid articles from music sheets to gardening shovels, hoping to cure herself by this penance of her bad habit.

Getting Back To Work

Henry Ford Paints A Bright Picture
Of Business Outlook

Henry Ford painted a bright picture of the business outlook in an interview at Detroit, predicting a prosperous 1939 and expressing the belief there would be no major European war. Business, he said, already is on the upgrade, and distinctly better times are on the way.

He cited "better feeling among the public generally" in support of his forecast.

"People are tired of the many 'isms' that have developed in the last five years," he said. "They are getting back to work, and work spells prosperity."

CHAPTER VI—Continued

A strange madness overpowered Hammond. He did not know why he insisted; he only realized that his face was hot and his veins pounding. "Give me that paper," he said thinly. There was something terrible about his eyes. Slowly the girl passed it over to him. His hands shook as he unfolded it, revealing its curt message:

"I.O.U."

"I thought so," said Hammond, and turned for the door. Jeanne moved desperately, catching him by the arm.

"Jack! Wait! Wait!"

"Why wait?" he asked. "I'm going after Sergeant Terry."

But she blocked him, frantic, both hands against his chest.

"Oh, don't," she gasped. "Please don't—please don't!"

Jack Hammond could not believe her.

"You're not going to let Lew Snade get away with a robbery?"

"I don't see anything else to do," Jeanne answered hopelessly.

"But—" vaguely Jack realized that he was discussing a situation of which he really knew nothing. "You can't do that. He stole your money!"

The girl sank against the door. "I simply can't go to the police. I guess that's why he left that I.O.U.—so I'd know who did it and not make a report."

"Why not?"

She rubbed her hands. "He still uses his own name."

"What of it?"

She smiled faintly. "I've changed mine," came at last.

"If I had to prosecute him, I would take him out to Fourcross—don't you understand?" Plainly Hammond did not and evidenced it. The girl added, in a colorless voice, "If it should ever get back home that Lew Snade had been arrested for stealing money from a girl—somebody would figure out the right name of that girl."

Again there was silence. At last Hammond began to pace the narrow confine between the door and the counter. Then Jeanne said:

"I don't hope you'd never have to know about him."

"I don't—if you put it that way."

But she had straightened now, her chin lifted with determination.

"I'll feel better if you do know."

He caught her by the arms, clutching them tight.

"Look here!" he asked. "Do you think anything could change my feeling about you—my friendship?"

"You? If that's the case, don't tell me. I don't want to know."

"You, of all persons, have the right to know."

She freed herself and walked past him to the door, closing it. Then she turned, leaned her back against it, as though the support would give her needed strength. Suddenly she drew back. A voice had come from outside:

"Hey, Jeanne! What's the idea? Shuttin' that door?"

Involuntarily she opened it. A miner entered from Kay's claim.

"Oh," he exclaimed. "I didn't know you were here, Mr. Hammond."

"Yes, I'm here. It was banal—but there was nothing else to say."

"Miss Kay thought you'd forgotten them nails."

"No—but while you're here, take them." Hammond claved a double handful of nails from the keg and passed them on to the miner.

"Tell Miss Kay I'll be down after a while," he commanded.

"Sure," the miner answered and started away.

"Jeanne, why can't I go to Terry about this man? He'd handle it confidentially. Certainly, we've got to do something."

The girl leaned wearily against the counter.

"Not necessarily."

"Why not? What right had he to come here and take money?"

"It gets to be a habit after a while. I guess to be no sarcasm in the statement, only resignation."

"I can't see it. Look here, you've made a start for yourself up here in the North. This fellow can't come out of your past and wreck it, no matter what the trouble—"

"The trouble is," she supplied dully, "that I'm tied to him."

"Married?"

"Worse than that."

"That's none of my business, Jeanne."

She rested her hand on the counter. "It is, Jack. The subject's been opened. You might as well have it all. Lew and I were kids together in The Pas. You know where that is?"

"Yes—in Northern Manitoba. Quite a town now, with all those mines opening up."

"My father ran a trading store there. It was as though she were in a witness chair. 'Neither Father nor Mother liked Lew. I worked in the trading store, especially when Father was up North. Well, this time he had to go into the Arctic circle to trade with the Eskimos. Before he left, he told me that I was to go to the annual fur auction in Winnipeg for which I know furs. So I went and took $3,000 with me.'"

"In currency?" Hammond had begun to see ahead.

"Yes. Father likes cash. Lew followed me down there. I was terribly in love with him." She must have caught the look in Hammond's eyes.

"Oh, he's changed so much—all in a year. I guess getting hold of that money did something to him."

"Evidently. So, after he met you in Winnipeg—?"

"So—well," she spread her hands. "I know," Hammond was trying to make it easier for her. "You were away where nobody would know—and you loved him—and life seemed something terribly precious that wouldn't last."

"Thanks," the girl answered. "And, too, I suppose he pulled the old gag—what was the use of worrying your parents by getting married to say nothing of his poor old mother, who'd never survive the shock—"

"I guess that was it. He said Lew had promised to come to his office the next morning and pay back every cent. So I went there. But—"

"He didn't show up," Hammond interjected coldly.

"No, Mr. Barstow had to tell me that he'd skipped out. That's when I first saw you—coming down the stairs from Mr. Barstow's office."

"I guess I know the rest. You haven't talked to him up here?"

The girl glanced at the I. O. U. where Hammond had tossed it.

"That's all," she said slowly. "I don't even know how he got here."

"I do. He came up with the last batch from Fourcross—got in the same night as Bruce Kenning. I know something more. He's going to give you back that money."

The girl flashed behind him.

"Don't go to Sergeant Terry! Please! You know how news is—the kind that comes out of my new mining camp. It goes all over. If Terry ever took him down to Fourcross—"

Jack Hammond raised his hand to her shoulder and gently pushed her away.

"I'm not going to Terry!" he announced.

Before he realized it, he was out of the store and stalking the crooked streets of the little town, head forward, a queer, ugly swing to his shoulders, as he searched the territory of tents and shacks. Then he turned down to the lake where Timmy Moon, grimy with oil, was working on his airplane.

"Seen Lew Snade?" he asked. Without waiting for an answer, "Where does he usually hang out? Anywhere around this camp? Does he work for Around the World Airline?"

"Give a guy time," growled Timmy. "I just saw him walking up Loon Creek, with Bruce Kenning."

(To Be Continued)

Eating grasshoppers killed by arsenic poison is not likely to kill livestock, judging by experiments; a horse or cow would have to eat over a million poisoned hoppers to get a fatal dose.

"That new girl of yours seems very nice and quiet," remarked a caller to the lady of the house.

"Yes, she's very quiet; she does not even disturb the dust when she is cleaning the room."

For many years there have been regular movements of oats from Canada to Switzerland, principally for army requirements.

MEN LOVE
GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will love you to dance and parties. . . If you are cool, lifeless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls who are full of pep. For three generations our women have held another how to go "filling through" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps Nature tone up the system, thus increasing the elements from the functional diet which women most need.

Spirit Of Goodwill

British Scientist Speaks Of Qualities
Needed To Build Social Structure

Sir William Gragg, one of Britain's leading scientists, urges the nation to find, first of all, internal reconciliation, and that goodwill must not now be damaged by encouragement of suspicion, "malicious interpretation and ignorant criticism."

"Policy, foreign as well as domestic, is for every nation ultimately determined by the character of her people and the inspiration of her leaders," declared Sir William, speaking on more rearmament. "The strength of a nation consists in the vitality of her principles. How can we bring about that permanent peace needed to build a social structure in which every part is of use and in which every member of the community feels cared for and wanted?"

"Moral rearmament means an experiment with the principles of Christ. It means a new fitness in our work, our body and our brain. We must put aside sternly every indulgence that clouds our vision and weakens our power. Clearly, the experiment will be spoiled if we damage goodwill by encouraging suspicion, malicious interpretation and ignorant criticism. Now is the time to pull ourselves together. We see the efficiency of authoritarian states and realize once again the power of discipline and common purpose. But our service must be voluntary, not forced, yet full and ready as if ordered by a dictator. The nearer we, as a nation, come to internal reconciliation, the more effective we shall be in arranging a reconciliation which is external and international and the nearer will be the day when all defenses can come down. We do not know how far away this day is. We only know it will come if we work and fight for it."

Target Practice

U.S. Army Anti-Aircraft Batteries
Prove Effective

United States army anti-aircraft batteries near Honolulu have been so thoroughly shooting up sleeve targets at 17,000 feet, supposedly the "ceiling" for that type of practice, that their officers have concluded they would be able to sweep Hawaiian skies clear of any enemy planes.

Coast artillery batteries have been scoring six or more hits in 20 shots at targets high climbing military planes. One hit in 20 has been considered good marksmanship for three-inch anti-aircraft guns.

The 17,000 feet represented the highest altitude reached by a plane during the target practice. A cylindrical canvas affair attached to a towing plane by a line 3,000 feet long.

May Appoint Commissioners
The Irish government is considering appointment of high commissioners to represent its interests in Canada, South Africa, Australia, and New Zealand, it was reported. Eire has no official representatives in the dominions, although it is represented in London by a high commissioner.

The bathysphere, curious globe in which William Beebe reached an ocean depth of 3,000 feet 1937, was subjected to a pressure of about 5,800 tons at the lowest level.

The larger whales, in the prime of life, increase more than 100 pounds in weight every day.

New Airplane Device

Would Land Plane Safely Without Aid Of Human Pilot

An airplane could land without the aid of a human pilot, if a patent just received by the United States government proves workable.

The new system would provide automatic control for airplane landings. The pilot would set the apparatus for action six or seven miles from the field and the device would do the rest.

Its functions include regulating the speed, making adjustments for crosswinds and vertical currents and finally putting on the brakes and bringing the plane to a stop at the spot desired. Five radio beams would be focused on the craft to guide it to a landing.

Francis Dunmore, senior radio engineer at the United States bureau of standards, contributed the basic ideas for the invention.

Good Musical Conductor

Sir Henry Wood Also Has Three
Other Professions

Sir Henry Wood, of London, who has commemorated his jubilee as a conductor of music, intended taking up singing professionally at first. He was advised otherwise by a musical friend, who told him: "Never take up singing, Henry. You have a conductor's voice. It will go through a brick wall." Sir Henry has three unusual hobbies for a musician. He is an expert carpenter, an equally expert plumber, and is also something of a painter. He has a library of 4,000 books and claims to have the finest collection of music in the world.

Seed Potatoes From Canada

Canada supplied approximately half of the 2,000,000 bushels of certified seed potatoes sold in the Argentine last fall. In Uruguay, 13,620 crates of the total 95,024 crates (of 110 pounds net) of the seed potatoes imported for the crop planted in January, February, 1938, were also supplied by Canada.

Beans are not usually looked upon as poultry feed, but oat beans are sometimes fed. It is best to cook the beans and feed them as part of a wet mash, similar to the way potatoes are fed.

CHINOOK MEAT MARKET

Rushing Business

Edmonton (P) — Edmonton's firmen did a lot of rushing about last night — and wound up by putting out a cigarette butt.
The fun started when a woman tried to mail a letter in a fire alarm
box. It brought a false alarm call.
Then at the general hospital somewhere dropped a cigarette butt in a hole in the floor. The men arrived in time to put it out.

In his announcement on Sunday morning the vicar regretted that money was not coming in quickly enough — but he was incessant.

"We have tried," he said, "to raise the necessary money in the usual manner. We have tried honestly. Now we are going to see what a bazaar can do."

The voice of a harassed student broke the silence of the examination room.

"Excuse me, sir," he called out to the professor, "could you tell me to day's date, please?"

"The date?" the examiner replied. "Come, come, sir — the date is of no importance — please proceed with your work at once."
"Oh all right — sorry," the student replied. "It was only that I wanted to be sure of having something correct in this paper!"

May Locat Branch

Coronation (Special) — The old
A. Towns building is being renovated at present. The property is owned by the town of Coronation, and it is reported that the place is to be used by the provincial government as a transit branch.

Seek Controlled Prices On Goods Farmers Needs

Winnipeg (Special) — Controlled prices not only of what farmers sell, but what they "buy" was the crux of the discussions before the Canadian Council of Agriculture, which closed a two-day session in Winnipeg Saturday night.

There was a full representation from the prairies. In addition there were many prominent in agrarian economies in attendance with no official standing. Every phase of the growing unrest of producers on the prairies was examined. It is significant of the situation that the suggested secession from the Saskatchewan angle was passed over practically as unimportant, but tremendous economic changes in fundamental policies were forecast by various speakers.

One phase was the expression: "It is better to have controlled prices even though it costs the government indirectly some $40,000,000, rather than pay out that amount in direct relief."

One or the other of these two propositions were impressed on the members. The economic situation on the prairies, members said, was infinitely more important than any form of political charges or discussions.

AMATEUR CONTEST & DANCE to BE HELD

An Amateur Contest and Dance will be held in Chinook School Friday, Nov. 4th.
Prizes $3.00, $2.00 and $1.00.
Entries must be in hands of Mr. Charyk Oct. 28th. Proceeds for purchase of film—slide machines for schools in the Cereon-Chinook sub-local.

Extended memorandum were prepared to forward to Ottawa and the prairie, provincial governments embodying the idea of controlled prices, not only of wheat, but all farm products, and, more to the point, possible control of prices of all articles necessary to agricultural production.

THE LADIES' GARD PARTY MET

The Ladies' Aid Club met on Tuesday evening at the home of Mrs. W. S. Lee. Honors were shared by Mrs. W. Gallagher and Mrs. Targett.
The next meeting will be held in the Phone Office with Mrs.
Gallagher as hostess.

Threshing days are over and a certain maiden is very economical on the downcast. The weather Sunday was identical to the feelingly more important young couple. We are pleased to charges or discussions.
